BOARD OF SAFETY IN REGULAR SESSION

Much Business Was Transacted at the Meeting Held Last Night.

The regular session of the Board of Public Safety was held last night. Chairman Ingraham presiding and Mayor Bliss and Messrs. Oliver and McGaughey present.

After the routine business the mayor as chairman of the committee upon testing the water pressure, reported on the work of that committee stating that while the pressure at the recent fire was between 60 and 70 pounds, that in some sections of the city, for instance East Zarragosa and South Baylen streets, it was very low, dropping as low as three pounds at some of the water plugs according to the gauge secured by the city with which to make such tests. The committee further recommended that in order to properly test the pressure that fire drills be held at any time that might be designated. The report was adopted.

Relative to the repairs necessary on the building occupied by the fire hose company on East Zarragosa street, the city attorney advised that the lease required the owner to keep same in repairs, and the chairman was instructed to see that such was done.

The Merchant Marine Detective Association made application for police power for its members. The board decided to grant police power to members individually, with the understanding that they were members of the association.

Police power was given to J. W. Kirksey, a night watchman on South Palafox street.

The board decided to advertise for bids for furnishing the city with medicines, surgical appliances, etc., for the ensuing year and appointed John G. Oliver and Mayor Bliss as a committee to receive bids and award the contract.

Chairman Ingraham brought up the question of employees of the city assigning their salaries to outside parties, giving them the authority to draw their checks each pay day, thus causing the city a great deal of annoyance and trouble. He recommended that the council be asked to pass an ordinance prohibiting the city employees from assigning their checks to others. This recommendation was placed in the form of motion and carried.

The bid of J. E. Dubuison & Bros. for furnishing feed for the stock of the department during the coming month was accepted, the bid being 44 cents per bushel for choice white clipped oats and $17.00 per ton for hay.

The applications of C. H. Williams and J. H. Gregg for positions in the police department, recommended by the marshal, were accepted, provided they could stand the necessary examination.

The application of George Hall for transfer from fire to the police department, recommended by the marshal, was granted.

Geo. W. Parker made application for a position in the police department. The application was referred to the marshal.

The application of C. H. Davis for a position in the fire department, was referred to the fire chief.

The board decided that monthly or quarterly inspections of the police department would be held hereafter. These inspections will be made at any time the board may choose and without allowing the officers to know the date.

SMOKER GIVEN BY CARPENTERS AND JOINERS

Enjoyable Affair at Which Numerous Speeches Were Made By Invited Guests.

The smoker given by Local No. 74, Carpenters and Joiners of America, in the Salisbury building hall last night was well attended by members of the union and those present were entertained by a number of eloquent and interesting speeches.

The meeting was presided over by P. O. Andrews, a member of Local No. 74, who announced that the smoker had been arranged for the purpose of explaining the differences which existed between the carpenters and the contractors and for enlisting the support of the business public in the carpenter's demands.

Brief addresses were made by Frank L. Hayes, Chas. M. Coston, Jas. M. Johnson, Jas. R. Landrum, Scott M. Loftin, Jno. B. Jones, and Mayor Chas. H. Bliss.

The chief address was that of Jas. M. Johnson, representing Local No. 74, Carpenters and Joiners, and as president of the local organization of the Structural Trades Alliance of America. Mr. Johnson explained the differences between the contractors and carpenters in detail. The carpenters wanted an eight-hour day at the same wages which they had been getting for a nine-hour day. The contractors were willing to a certain increase in wages, but were not willing to concede the eight-hour day, and that was where the hitch came in.

Mr. Johnson showed, and very clearly, that whether the wages were increased or the work day was shortened, the difference did not come out of the contractors' pockets, but that it was paid by the man whose house was being built. This, he said, was the same case when the mills, advanced the price of lumber—the contractor did not pay the difference in price—that was paid by the owner of the building. There was, however, he said, this difference—the contractor did not care to buck a big institution like a saw mill, but did not hesitate to deny the carpenters shorter hours that they desired.

Mr. Johnson said that the prosperity of a community was governed by the wages which the laboring men in that community received. The better they had the money they had to spend with the business men of the town, and it was therefore to the business men's interests to have labor well paid.

There was a great deal of enthusiasm at the meeting and all of the speakers were frequently applauded.

TYPICAL STATE OF FROZEN NORTH

Native of Iowa Describes Its Resources and Beauties for Southern Readers.

Editor Pensacola Journal:

Being from the north, I thought that possibly your readers might be interested in an article relative to Iowa, the state in which I live.

Iowa is noted for the richness of its soil and for the abundance of its crops. It is almost a purely agricultural state, its chief products being corn, oats, barley, flax and grasses. Timothy and clover grow there in great abundance. It is not so good for wheat as some of the other northern states, although quite a large amount of wheat is produced by the state every year. The corn crops of Iowa are simply immense. A field that does not average fifty bushels to the acre is considered poor, many fields averaging from seventy to eighty bushels to the acre. Before leaving home a number of farmers told me that their oat crop yielded from forty five to fifty-five and sixty bushels per acre. This will give you some idea of the abundance of these cereals produced in the state.

In a certain sense Iowa is not a "frozen fruit state," no winter apples nor peaches being raised there, excepting in its southwestern counties. Small fruits of all kinds, however, including strawberries, blackberries, raspberries, etc., grow there in great abundance.

The climate of Iowa is somewhat vigorous during the winter months, as your Pensacola readers will readily admit when I state that it is no uncommon thing for the mercury to go down to 30 and 36 degrees below zero and occasionally to 40 below. In February of last year, on the 13th of the month the government thermometer in my home town registered 32 below zero. This, however, was something unusual for so late in the season. Myself and family left home for Pensacola on the 11th of this month and two or three times before we left it was as low as 6 degrees below zero.

It may be a matter of conjecture to people who have been born and raised in so mild a climate as that of Florida how we who live in so vigorous a climate as that of Iowa can endure it, but I assure them that we suffer no inconvenience from it, for we are prepared for it. Our homes are built with reference to warmth, most of them having and walls sheeted on the outside of the studding with tongue and grooved lumber, which is overlaid with thick building paper, and then weatherboards. This makes a floor and wall almost impervious to cold. All of our homes are heavily plastered, many of them being back or double plastered and papered on the inside. Then we have a great abundance of fuel, there being coal enough under the soil of Iowa to supply the needs of the whole United States for centuries.

After such a statement as this it may seem strange to say that coal in Iowa is no cheaper than it is in Pensacola, except in the immediate vicinity of the mines. When it is once loaded on the cars and hauled by the railroads a few miles, one must pay as much for it as it costs in Pensacola.

The snow storms of Iowa are sometimes something terrific, the drifts in many places being seven or eight feet deep. This condition prevailed with us last winter, when we had more snow than usual. Of course at such times men must hustle with shovels and other appliances to keep the roads open and the sidewalks clean, but such work puts vim in men and makes them glad that they are alive.

In such a climate ample provision must be made for the protection of animals against the weather. Every farmer has large warm built and commodious barns and sheds for his stock, and these and much to the beauty of rural Iowa. The eye of man never rested upon a more beautiful and inspiring scene than that presented by the country districts of Iowa toward the close of the month of June. At this season of the year these districts are covered with every variety of growing crop indigenous to them and furnish as glorious a picture as any that the earth ever presents.

I wish that the people of the south would make summer tours to the north, as we of the north make winter

The price of land in Iowa is very high, selling for from seventy to one hundred and fifty dollars per acre. I should be glad while in Pensacola to learn from its citizens any pertinent facts concerning the town and country adjacent for publication, as I write a little for some of the northern papers.
